

Winter canoeing

It may seem that winter is not the best time to go canoeing. We definitely have a different opinion and according to us in winter you can organize a canoeing trip on low lying rivers. Canoeing down a freezing river provides unforgettable emotions – both due to the beauty of the winter landscape as well as a certain amount of adrenaline. During winter the canoeing conditions are not much different than those in late autumn and early spring. Sometimes you can come across a very high water level – in such a case a stream can change into a wild river and coastal meadow – in a lake. Nature in winter is beautiful and special. These are good reasons to face few inconveniences connected with winter canoeing. The photos cannot even partially convey the beauty of icy scenes. The sun reflects in snowflakes left in reed and hanging from branches of trees situated above the water. In the evening and in the morning there is dense fog above the water. There are birds wintering on the river – ducks, swans. On the banks you will see routes left by the beavers. You must see it as it is impossible to be described. There is no other way to experience the beauty but to take part in an incredible winter adventure.
